CHIEF'S MESSAGE

In any business, a budget determines how a company's objectives are to be met over the course of the fiscal year. Although as a law enforcement agency we do not generate revenue or profits, we are no different: the budget is the bottom line, and is, therefore, the guide for strategizing the coming year of police work. In late May, the City Council approved the Department's 2007-2008 annual budget, which contains a total increase of more than $52 million

The Next Generation of Patrol

T3 Series Personal Electric Mobility vehicles take patrolling to new heights. First introduced to the Department approximately four months ago with two loaner vehicles, the new T3 enhances patrolling visibility with its eight inch raised platform. With a top speed of 25mph, the T3 improves efficiency by allowing officers to patrol larger areas in a shorter amount of time.

Utilized by the Department at this year's Academy Awards, King Day Parade and at the Los Angeles International Airport, the T3's zero-degree turning radius and compact design allow for easy maneuvering through crowds and tight spaces, while its wide, three-wheel base provides stability and ease of use.

The environmentally friendly zero-emissions T3 runs for less than 10 cents per day and the vehicle's two re-chargeable batteries can be easily swapped out to eliminate downtime and allow for continual deployment.

Sergeant Dan Gomez, Tactical Technology Unit, said the Department's reaction to the T3 vehicles has been very positive. So much so, three additional units have been purchased through Motor Transport Funding to compliment the two units the Department has on loan. The Department will be testing deployment of the vehicles in Central Area to augment the footbeats and cycle units.

T3 Motion, the manufacturer of the T3 Series Personal Electric Mobility vehicle, has dedicated itself to raising the bar on environmental standards and law enforcement capabilities in personal mobility technology. □ dollars. Within the new budget are some significant and favorable changes that I want to share with you. It's going to be a very tough budget year in the City, but we got much of what we were looking for.

Vehicles are vital to the work we do, and many of ours have met or exceeded the replacement criteria in the past year. In the new budget, we have successfully added funding- a total of more than $4.5 million dollars- in order to deliver 426 vehicles and 22 motorcycles in the next fiscal year. The replacement vehicles will include 92 black and whites, 40 hybrids, 210 plain vehicles, 66 undercover vehicles and 18 specialty vehicles. We also have a new helicopter on its way.

City Council has added $1.3 million dollars to the budget, specifically for the purchase of tasers. As I mentioned in my message to you last month, we are continuing the field testing of a new and improved taser, the X-26. The budget increase will allow for the purchase of up to 1,250 of these X-26 tasers in the new fiscal year.

The new budget will allow us to beef up our staff in Scientific Investigation Division, an area of increasing importance and in growing demand in this modern era of policing. We will add 19 positions in SID, including 12 in the DNA Unit, 6 in Firearms Analysis Unit and 1 in the warehouse of the new Regional Crime Lab. Three of the positions added to Firearms Analysis Unit will allow the Department to re-deploy three Police Officers to field activities. Additional funding has been added for DNA analysis equipment and for other technical equipment for the Firearms Analysis, Photography and Latent Prints units. The overall effect of these additions and upgrades will be a more state-of-the-art and efficient operation than ever before in the history of the Department.

The Cold Case Unit, whose successes are oftentimes very dependent on the progress made in DNA technologies, as well as the dedicated efforts of our esteemed, departed Commander Jim Tatreau, will add 9 new positions to its staff. This will increase the Department's ability to perform follow-up investigations and use forensic techniques that might not have been available at the time of the original investigation. The additional detectives will also assist the Department in responding to the anticipated increase in DNA hits on cold cases caused by the implementation of Proposition 69. As we solve more crimes, we make more arrests. The budget reflects the increased workload demands in Jail Division by adding 20 new Detention Officers.

Recruitment, with the reality of DROP-related attrition upon us, is a top priority for the Department, now more than ever. The proposed signing bonuses that were the focus of much media attention last winter now have financing. Over $1 million has been added to the budget for these signing bonuses. The proposal is that new recruits entering the Academy receive $5,000, half of which will be delivered upon graduation, with the remaining balance due upon completion of probation. Individuals coming to us from other law enforcement agencies would

The Los Angeles Police Foundation awarded twenty-eight Los Angeles Community College District Students with $1000 scholarships on Friday, June 1, 2007. receive a bonus of $10,000, with half being paid upon completion of the Lateral Program and the balance due upon completion of probation. This bonus would be retroactive to June 2006.

The new budget will enable the Department to add a total of 780 officers in the coming fiscal year. This figure represents an addition of 226 officers to the 554 officers that were already budgeted for the coming year. It is an ambitious number, but one that we are on-target to meet, thanks to the diligent efforts of our Personnel Group. Historically, the Department has been understaffed. We are making a concerted effort to narrow the gap and come closer to more favorable officer-to-citizen ratios enjoyed by other big cities.

Staying on the subject of recruitment, there is more good news to share: the Department has surpassed 9,500 officers for the first time in 12 years. Furthermore, we recruited and hired more officers last year than in the previous year and, although we lost approximately 545 officers due to attrition, we hired 730. The average class size since January 2007 has grown to 65 candidates, which exceeds expectations. We are also successfully recruiting candidates who are more representative of the demographics of Los Angeles. The recruit class of June 2007 consisted of 14% African American, 38% Latino, 9% Asian and 39% Caucasian candidates. The current total sworn population of the Department is more diverse than in recent memory, with a breakdown of 12.4% African American, 38% Latino, 8.1% Asian

Ten middle school students were honored at an awards breakfast held at Univision Studios on Thursday, May 24, 2007. This year's writing competition asked Los Angeles Unified School District and Archdiocese of Los Angeles students to ponder the question, "As a Los Angeles Police Department officer, what important safety tips would you give middle school students who visit chat rooms or have a personal website?"

The LAPD Essay Contest, now in its 4th year, whose goal is to advance education through literacy challenges students to take an analytical look at youth crime and law enforcement. Recommendations included not giving away personal information, never talking to strangers, and obtaining parental 40% Caucasian sworn officers. The number of Female Officers has also grown to 18.6%.

The result of all of your hard work is a lot of the news making headlines. We can and should all take pride in the decrease of homicides and crime over the last five years. By the end of May, there had been 43% fewer murders over five years. Aggravated assaults are down 60% over five years. Total Part I crimes are down by almost one-third, at 31%. These are historic drops and historic lows. Further encouragement comes from the gang-related crime statistics, where 9 out of the 11 crime categories have seen mostly double-digit drops over the past 5 years. Gang-related homicide is down by over 51%, with aggravated assault down by 32%.

Officer Andrew P. Taylor wears his badge a whole lot closer to his heart nowadays. At a monthly press briefing held May

7, 2007, in the Central Area Police Station, Chief Bratton presented Officer Taylor with his former badge, encased in plexiglass.

Officer Taylor was shot and injured at an Assault with a Deadly Weapon radio call in the Westlake area in the early morning hours of January 22, 2007. The 12-year veteran of the Department, assigned to Rampart Patrol Division, was responding to the call when the suspect began shooting at him on the 600 block of South Coronado Street. Fellow patrol officers immediately became involved, which resulted in the suspect's death.

Four rounds struck Officer Taylor: one round entered an unprotected area under his right arm and traveled through his back, one round struck his ballistic vest on the right side of his chest, a third round hit the officer's holstered service pistol, and the fourth round hit his LAPD badge. It was this badge, still dented, that the Chief presented to Officer Taylor.

The Los Angeles Police Department enters this new fiscal year with great momentum, a workable budget, recruitment tools and statistics that will significantly further our goals of a larger, more diverse force, and crime statistics that even our harshest critics have to commend. Behind all of this good news, are the men and women of this Department, Sworn and Civilian. We are a Department made up of extraordinary people whose commitment to excellence and dedication has made a noticeable difference for the people of Los Angeles. My personal congratulations on the great job all are doing. □

Pre-Retirement Planning Seminars

In its mission to advance the health and retirement security of those who dedicate their careers to serve and protect the people of Los Angeles, the Department of Fire and Police Pensions (LAFPP) offers two pre-retirement planning seminars: one for its members early in their career and one for members who are near retirement.

LAFPP's Fine-Tuning Your Retirement Plans seminar was developed for active members within five years of retirement. This seminar emphasizes financial planning and estate planning strategies for members' retirement years.

LAFPP's Planning For Your Future seminar was created for active members in the early stages of their career. This seminar emphasizes savings and investment opportunities available to members to supplement their Fire & Police Pension Plan.

The seminars are currently being held at the Grace Simons Lodge from 9:00 AM to 3:00 PM. Seminar attendance is by invitation only. Members are invited to seminars based on years of service and level of interest.

Upcoming seminars are scheduled for:

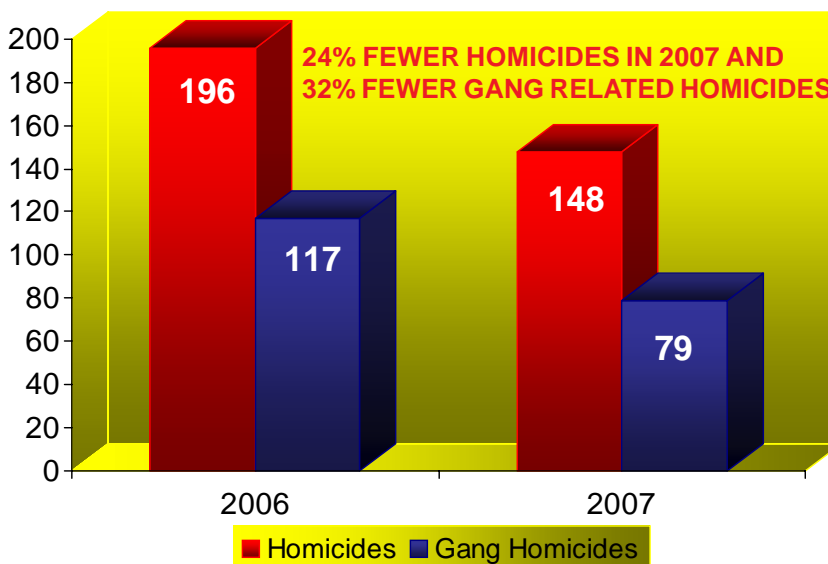

Dramatic Reduction in Homicide Rate

On May 31, 2007, at the 77th Area Police Station, Chief Bratton and Mayor Villaraigosa announced the dramatic reduction in the City's homicide rate. The numbers speak for themselves: 24% fewer homicides (148 homicides in 2007 compared to 196 homicides in 2006) and 32% fewer gang-related homicides (79 homicides in 2007 compared to 117 homicides in 2006) over the same period last year. The Chief attributed the drop to a combination of resources, expertise, help from the community and the collaborative effort between LAPD and government agencies working together under the South Bureau Criminal Gang Homicide Group, established by Commander Pat Gannon. The group of gang and homicide detectives works with 7 FBI agents, 2 Deputy District Attorneys, as well as City Attorneys and ATF agents to focus on solving murders, including gang murders and attempted murders in the South Bureau, the region of the city where the most gang-related murders occur.
